INTRODUCTION

Donyi Polo Cultural and Charitable Trust (DPCCT), based in Arunachal Pradesh, is devoted to uplifting indigenous communities and preserving their cultural heritage. The organization's mission focuses on safeguarding and promoting the traditions, customs, and values of these communities to ensure their continuity for future generations. To realize this vision, DPCCT has established Gurukul-style indigenous schools in various regions of the state. These institutions provide free education, combining academic excellence with a curriculum designed to foster cultural awareness and pride among students from diverse indigenous backgrounds.

As part of our efforts to serve indigenous communities, DPCCT organizes free health camps to address vital healthcare needs. Recently, with the support of RITES Limited, we conducted camps in districts such as East Kameng and Keyi Panyor district of Arunachal Pradesh benefiting residents in remote areas.

GLIMPSES FROM THE CAMP

Donyi Polo Cultural and Charitable Trust expresses profound gratitude to RITES Limited for their invaluable support of the Free Mega Health Camp initiative under their CSR program. The successful completion of Phase I has brought significant relief to numerous residents in remote areas, offering free medical services that are often inaccessible. These camps have been particularly impactful for elderly individuals unable to travel for healthcare and for impoverished villagers who now have access to free medications prescribed by the DB Healthcare team. RITES Limited's support has been instrumental in addressing healthcare challenges in remote and marginalized communities, and DPCCT looks forward to continued collaboration to further their shared mission of promoting health and well-being in these regions.
